Right in proceedings before this federal commission. The state standard for water quality could only be met with ROR. Basically, holding back water and then releasing it is hostile to riverine habitat and unhealthy for water quality, due to cumulative high temperatures at low flow and turbidity from sediment stir. DEP even rejected FERC’s own staff report, which recommended ROR April to June and pond-and-release July through March. The decision was supported by EPA, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and many other organizations, including the local Housatonic River Commission. Most boating interests opposed the decision.

In short, issuing a license for the next 40 years with the existing flow regime made little environmental sense. As it now stands, the river will become a free-flow waterway, and you will boat when it is boatable, fish when it is fishable, and hike, picnic and drive next to a river that is more than a mud flat during dry months, when the water would have been held back. The power company will generate on continuous flow. The new license includes dozens of other provisions on behalf of the public, which in fact owns the river and water. View these provisions in a copy of the license at the selectman’s office. For public opinion, visit the Cornwall website (www.cornwallct.org). —Philip W. Hart

New School/Old School
CCS will open late this month (Wednesday, September 1) and construction czar Jim Terrall expects work on the old building to be finished, with the new gymnasium not far behind—“before the end of September.”

I had a personal tour about mid-July, and there were at least 25 workmen hustling like Lance Armstrong bearing down on a finish line. It was exciting! Students and faculty may not recognize the old place. Just about every room has been changed. The applicable words here are alter, renovate, and enlarge.

The old gym area is now five rooms: a kindergarten, a new kitchen, a multi-purpose area, and offices for the school psychologist and the speech therapist. The school offices have been redone and the west corridor has new rooms for music, art, and special education and reading. There are special entrances and stairwells better situated for moving bigger kids around the lower grades quickly and efficiently. Downstairs, there is a large new science room and a new faculty lounge and bathrooms.

The new building is very impressive. The gym has a nice feel to it, with bleachers situated on the south wall and a very decent stage behind a folding backboard at the west end of the court. There are new bathrooms.

an office for the gym department, storage areas, and a very handsome lobby which will soon be the new school entrance.

Student drop-offs and pickups will be in the new parking area, while buses will take on and discharge passengers on the school side of Cream Hill Road.

The work has changed CCS dramatically, and the cost for all this change is expected to come in on budget. —John Miller

July Fest

The town green was a busy place on July 3 for Park and Recreation’s annual July Fest. It was a perfect summer day—warm in the sun, cool in the shade, not a cloud in the sky. Dominating the green were three huge inflated playscapes: a bouncy house, a 25-foot mountain to climb, complete with ropes and saddles; and an obstacle course to slither, slide, and bounce through. There were jugglers with boxes of juggling equipment—balls, a stick, and bowling pins—so everyone could give it a try. If you didn’t want to bounce or juggle, you could eat; hamburgers, hot dogs, lemon-ade, and iced tea were provided at no charge.

The annual children’s foot races were run, and a good effort was made by all. The winners of the 5-and-under race were: Jack Brandfield, first; Eleanor Zuckerman, second; and Lily Horan, third. In the 6- to 8-year-old race, the winners were: Anna Gey selera, first; Frankie Ott, second; and Zack Busby, third.

In the mile run, the winner was Nick Dzenutis with a time of 7:24; Jack Ott came in second, and R. J. Thompson was third. Gabrie Ia Dzenutis was the first girl to cross the line, with a time of 9:32, immediately followed by Olivia Scott. Finn Alexander finished with a time of 13:24. At age 4, he is the current record-holder as the youngest competitor.

What’s Your House Worth?

A lady is coming to take a picture of your house to help her get an idea of what it’s worth. No, she’s not a real estate broker. She’s Barbara Bigos, the newly appointed Assessor for Cornwall. She wants the picture to help familiarize herself with every property in town. She plans to add a digitalized picture of your house to the individual records she’ll keep of every one of Cornwall’s 800-odd houses.

Barbara is already the assessor for Salisbury, and her working history includes assignments as assessor in Harwinton and Morris, where she is currently completing a full revaluation of all properties.

“I love being an assessor,” she told me. “It’s a job where I’m never bored, and where I get a chance to meet people of all types.” She clearly delights in the variety offered by her work, which ranges from valuing motor vehicles (“Most are worth less as they age, but Harley-Davidsons gain value.”) to houses (“Antique ones gain value as they age, but most contemporaries don’t; neighborhood quality can influence house values a lot, even within the same town.”).

Ms. Bigos is well trained for her new job. She has a bachelor’s degree in math and history from Central Connecticut State University and a master’s in education from the same school. The State of Connecticut certified her as a Municipal Tax Assessor in 1991. She began work as an assessor in Harwinton in 1988, added Morris in 1994 and took on Salisbury in 2002. She plans to continue working for Salisbury as well as Cornwall.

Barbara grew up in rural Maine (so don’t try to fool her on the market value of pasture land). She has lived in Harwinton with her husband, John, for some time. She has two adult children.

While Barbara learns more about Cornwall, she already knows something about us: that we’re a mix of wealthy and poor folks, that our property values are rising, though perhaps not as fast as in Salisbury, and that we have a lot of artists here (“I can assign personal property values to easels and brushes, but not to paint or canvas, because they are considered supplies.”).

Tell your house to smile for the assessor’s camera, but not to look too good.

Win/Win: Beavers vs. Lawrence

Lawrence Van Valkenburgh has solved the beaver problem in the most ingenious, simple, and satisfactory way.

The venue is the large flooded meadow at the intersection of Cream Hill and Rattlesnake Roads. The beavers have dammed up the culvert under the road and created a beautiful pond for their benefit as well as for much avian and other animal life.

In order to keep the level of water in the pond constant—deep enough for the beavers but not flooding the roads—Lawrence has devised a plan. He has built a small pad close to the dam and the road which will hold the weight of his earth-moving machine, and, from time to time, when the dam threatens to raise the level of the water too high, he removes part of the dam and deposits it along the edge of the pond. From there the beavers can easily retrieve the necessary building materials for their project and do not need to go and cut down more of Lawrence’s trees.

The beavers construct and Lawrence deconstructs. The water level remains constant and everyone is happy.

This solution is, however, a little labor intensive and is not, therefore, recommended for use by the Cornwall Town Crew. —Celia Senzer

Our New ZEO settles In “An thoroughly enjoyable process,” is the way Zoning Enforcement Officer Karl Nilsen describes his first months in Cornwall.

In a recent interview, Karl said he was pleasantly surprised by the degree of sophistication in our zoning regulations. He says their clarity makes them easier to enforce. His also commented on the excellent relationships between our Board of Selectmen and the land-use boards, something not always the case in other communities.

When he arrived, Karl said, there were many problems needing attention. A major one was the erosion at Furnace Brook Farm, off Route 4, which is approaching solution. Other problems included signage violations—a common problem in many other communities. Karl said, “We’ll soon tackle a complete revision of the sign regulations to reflect the culture of the town.”

Karl’s goal is to work with residents and to handle enforcement problems in a way to make sure that perceived violations are, in fact, really violations and not differences of opinion or interpretations. That approach, he says, avoids lawsuits.

Welcome to Cornwall, Karl!

Innkeepers at Home

The popular Cornwall Inn has been taken over by new owners, the husband and wife team of Mark Hampson and Stacey Marcin.

Formerly operators of a B&B in Philadelphia’s center city, the Hampsons spent two years looking at 30 properties from New England to Maryland before deciding that Cornwall and the Inn were ideal for them and their children, Ella, age 4, and Trevor, age 2. Mark and Stacey have a novel approach to running the Inn and raising their children: they alternate roles each week between innkeeper and child raiser.

The Inn and its 13 guest rooms have been spruced up, and a new more extensive menu described as “classic country with gourmet flair” has been installed under the aegis of Chef Stefan Kappes, a graduate of the famed Culinary Institute of America and a former restaurant proprietor himself. The Inn is available for private parties and for meetings.

Currently the Inn’s hours are from 5 to 10 P.M., Thursday through Sunday.

A Fresh Face at UCC

At a congregational meeting on June 27, members of the United Church of Christ picked as their new minister the Reverend Madelon Nunn-Miller. “Micki,” as she is affectionately known, will fill the vacancy left by Peter Hammond two years ago.

Reverend Micki comes here after 18 years’ tenure at the Congregational Church in Cresskill, New Jersey. She received her Master’s in Divinity at Duke and completed further graduate work there as well as at Drew University and Union Theological Seminary. She has been a leader in ecumenical and community groups in the central Atlantic area.

A divorced mother of two grown sons, Micki sings in the choir, plays the guitar, likes to hike, and is an avid reader of mysteries. She will be moving into the parsonage in the end of October, and is looking forward to becoming acquainted with the larger community. On several visits here from her suburban New York home, Micki expressed wonder at the beauty of Cornwall and delight at how much was going on in our small, rural community.

ART AND THE HOUSATONIC

At the recent juried art shows of the Housatonic River in Sheffield and Lenox, Lennart Svede Alstrom of Cornwall was awarded a second prize. Three other Cornwall artists have honorable mention awards; Emily Buchanan, Erica Child, Prud’homme, and Catherine Wallace Harding. Congratulations to all! Their paintings and more will be on exhibit at the Norman Rockwell Museum starting on Saturday, August 14, their festival day. Erica and Emily also have paintings in a new book put together by the Sheffield Art League (SAL), Art and the River—Views and Visions of the Housatonic.

Events Calendars for the numerous art events and festival days organized by SAL are available in the Cornwall Libraries. Please pick one up.

The artistic attention to the river is great along with all the attention given to the run of the river vs. pond-and-release. However, I am constantly disappointed by the lack of interest in the huge problem of the contamination of the river by PCBs. You may have read the alert by American Rivers that the Housatonic River is number seven on their list of the ten most endangered rivers. Why? Because of the complicity of those who think that the PCBs aren’t that big a problem. After years of attending meetings in Pittsfield, Lenox, Lee, Kent, and New Milford, as well as hearing the Environmental Protection Agency’s results of 15 years of testing and studying the health and environmental effects of these poisonous PCBs, I know we need to continue the clean-up process.

If you would like to attend any of these meetings, call me at 672-6738.

GENEROUS SUPPORT FOR ART

Thank you so much to Gail Jacobson for her generous donation to the CCS Art program and for organizing Art at the Dump. The kids love seeing the work and it provides seeds for their own projects.

This school year, the Art at the Dump Fund was used to support several visiting artists, with an emphasis on ceramics. Delores Coan worked with 7th grade students for several weeks. Students made garden creatures and spirit masks, and then enjoyed a day of primitive firing. The kids greatly benefit from the diversity of experience in the arts found here in our community. If there is an artist interested in a residency working with our students next year, please contact me; we’ll keep the visiting artist program growing.

Who Wants To Be a J.P.? The State of Connecticut says Cornwall can have 57 Justices of the Peace for a new four year term starting January 2005—19 each for registered Republicans, Democrats, and unaffiliated or minor-party electors.

Democrats and Republicans endorsed candidates at meetings held in May. Now the Town Clerk is charged with appointing unaffiliated or minor-party candidates for J.P. upon applications made starting August 1.

So if you are an unaffiliated voter or member of a minor party: i.e., ACP, Green, Libertarian, and have a hankering to marry people, take depositions, or give oaths (J.P.s are no longer empowered to quell riots) contact the Town Clerk’s office for an application to be returned no later than November 1. Names will be drawn in a public ceremony should more than 19 apply.

Don’t Miss Your Chance to Vote: Applications for an absentee ballot for the presidential election are now available at the Town Clerk’s office. Students returning to school, and other electors not able to vote in person on election day, November 2, should fill out an application and return it to the Town Clerk. This will ensure that when absentee ballots become available on October 1, one will be sent to you in time to return it by election day. Absentee ballots received after November 2 are not counted. No matter what your political persuasion, it is sure to be a year when every vote counts.

The Sixth Annual Interfaith Service will be held under a tent on the Town Green on Sunday, August 8, at 10 A.M. The theme is Celebrating Community. Sponsored by the various faith groups in Cornwall, the service will draw from Christianity, Judaism, Islam, and Buddhism. The sermon will be given by the Reverend Ledlie Laughlin. All are welcome. Refreshments will follow the service. For more information, call the UCC office, 672-6840.
